

To whom it may concern:

I just read an article about cellular phone companies and their desire to stop portability of cell phone numbers when a consumer changes cellular providers. I believe that portability should be allowed for all users. This is especially true when you move to locations that have better service with one provider than the other. In these days of change, it would be nice to have the convenience of keeping at least your phone number consistent. I would like to support the availability of portability.

Thank you for your time,
